OOH lllCfc andXaH IUCfU Fa B. 228. A JfJOjsertiattS WS.% Blown off. THere was a Horse-man had a Cap on with a False Head, os Hair tackd to it. There comes a Puff of Wind, and blows off Cap and Wig together The People made sport, he saw, with his bald Crown, and fo very fairly he put in with them to laugh for Company. Why Gendemen (feys he) would you have me keep other Peoples Hair better than I did my own. The Moral. Many a Man would be etfreamly Ridiculous is he did not spoil the Jestby playing upon himself first. REFLECTION. TIS a Turn of Art, in many Cafes, either of Deformity or Mischance, where a Man lies open to a Reproach to anticipate an Abuse, and to make Sport with himself sirst. A Man may be Shame-facd, and a Woman modest, to the Degree of scandalous. I knew a Lady had one of the most bashful, scrupulous Persons to her Daughter that ever was born. Well, lays she, lam mightily afraid this Girl will prove a Whore; for jhe is fo infinitely Modest, that in my Conscience, is any Manjould ever ask her the Question, Jhe would not have the Face to deny him. A frank easy Way of Openness and Candour agrees best with all Humours; and he thats over-sollicitous to conceal a Thing, docs as good as make Proclamation of it. Wherefore tjie Horse-man here laughdfirst; and so prevented the Jest. Fab. 229. foO IpW Here, were Two Pots that stood near one another, by the Side of a River, the One of Brass, and the Other of Clay. The Water overflowd the Banks, and carryd them both away-, the Earthen Vesselkept
