

Delayed Surrender 2

Mallory and Arrick are attempting to be a couple. His somewhat sadistic need to dominate her in the bedroom is a constant issue between the pair. She is a survivor of past abuse and his need to inflict pain upon his lover is proving difficult for her to handle. She is coping, and he is patient, but she is afraid of where he wishes to escalate. Arrick's mother hates her and thinks she is far too low to date her son, and in an attempt to relieve some pressure, he takes Mallory on a weekend getaway to his mentors home in the country. Hendrick welcomes the pair, but everything went sour in the blink of an eye. Mallory goes home alone, and Arrick tells her it is over.

Mallory is heartbroken and she falls into a deep, suicidal depression that lasts months. Her friend Trish helps her and slowly she starts to heal and mend. She takes a new job with more responsibility, which motivates and distracts her. On the opening night of the new agency, Arrick Sanderson Jr. appears and pleads for her forgiveness. She is just beginning to recover and live again. Will she succumb to the man she considers her soul mate?
