

The Distance, Book One

This erotic romance contains subject matter not intended for readers under the age of 18 Series Synopsis: When Michael Anderson finds himself alone after the end of a third disastrous relationship, he decides to try something different at the urging of his best friend Damien. He decides to enter the murky world of paid sex at Madam Trina's upscale bordello. Leery at first, he finds the experience exhilarating and liberating. He also finds Selene. Selene, one of Madam Trina's ladies is what Michael always claimed he wanted. A woman to have sex with, with no expectations of anything more. Over time, he finds his visits to Madam Trina's bordello less satisfying and he makes arrangements to bring Selene into his home as his paid companion. At first, Michael is thrilled, but eventually over time the thrill lessens when instead of discovering all the secrets of his enigmatic mistress, he is as much in the dark as he was the day he met her. Their satisfying relationship pales when he finds himself revealing more and more of who he is with receiving anything in return. Who is Selene? Where did she come from? How did she come to work for Madam Trina? Why does she and Madam Trina look so alike? Michael Anderson tries to find the answers to these and other questions in this series of erotic romances. He also tries to bridge the distance between what he wants and what he needs. Finally, he tries to bridge the distance between Selene and himself. The Distance is a story of what happens when a seemingly cold man meets his counterpart. Book One Synopsis: Before Selene there were other women, one of which was Chloe. Long limbed, lily-white, the perfect lady on the outside with a strange bent for exhibitionism on the inside. A bent Michael discovered and used to help Chloe discover her true inner wanton? This erotic romance contains subject matter not intended for readers under the age of 18
