

Sports, Leagues and Athletes (Entertainment Law Series)

THIS CASEBOOK contains two U. S. Supreme Court decisions and a selection of 32 U. S. Court of Appeals decisions that discuss and analyze issues affecting sports, sports leagues and athletes. The selection of decisions spans from 2004 to the date of publication. Three recent decisions highlight the tension between the First Amendment right of free expression and an athletes right of publicity. There is a world of difference between an ad congratulating a local community group and an ad congratulating a famous athlete. Both ads will generate goodwill for the advertiser. But an ad congratulating a famous athlete can only be understood as a promotional device for the advertiser. Unlike a community group, the athlete needs no gratuitous promotion and his identity has commercial value. [Such an] ad cannot be construed as a benevolent act of good corporate citizenship. Jordan v. Jewel Food Stores, Inc., (7th Cir. 2014) The States interest in permitting a right of publicity ... is closely analogous to the goals of patent and copyright law, focusing on the right of the individual to reap the reward of his endeavors. (citations omitted) Hart v. Electronic Arts, Inc., 717 F. 3d 141 (3rd Cir. 2013) [V]ideo games are protected as expressive speech under the First Amendment. Brown v. Entmt Merchs. Assn, ___ U.S. ___, 131 S.Ct. 2729, 2733, 180 L.Ed.2d 708 (2011). As the Supreme Court has noted, video games communicate ideas and even social messages through many familiar literary devices (such as characters, dialogue, plot, and music) and through features distinctive to the medium (such as the players interaction with the virtual world). Id. As a result, games enjoy the full force of First Amendment protections. As with other types of expressive conduct, the protection afforded to games can be limited in situations where the right of free expression necessarily conflicts with other protected rights. Hart

v. Electronic Arts, Inc., ibid. [The] use of the likenesses of college athletes ... in [] video games is not, as a matter of law, protected by the First Amendment. In Re NCAA Student-Athlete Name & Likeness, 724 F. 3d 1268 (9th Cir. 2013)
