

A Look at California Juries: Participation, Shortcomings and Recommendations

Trial by jury is a foundation of the American legal system, generally considered a guardian of liberty and guarantor of fairness. It relies on the participation of large numbers of ordinary citizens. In the words of the California statute book, trial by jury is a cherished constitutional right, and jury service is an obligation of citizenship (Cal. Code. Civ. Proc. 191). In many places, participation is widespread. In California, however, especially in large urban centers such as Los Angeles, avoidance of jury service is common. In recent years, courts have implemented a number of reforms, most notably the one-day, one-trial system. Measuring the extent of jury participation and the impact of recently implemented reforms was the goal of this report.
