

The Keys to Jericho

Thirty-year-old Jared Beckett has always lived his life unconsciously, contemptuously, single-handedly, and on his own. His mothers abandoning him when he was a toddler laid the bitter foundation in which he proceeded to build upon, but that was only the launch of his downward spiral. Adding to his foundation of resentment, and unbeknownst to anyone, when Jared was 16, he had met a girl in school who made him question his enduring doubts. They became fast friends, but he became frustrated when she didnt return his advances. Their friendship grew strained, forced, and painful. On his last day of school, he finally said goodbye to her and didnt look back, yet never moving forward, caught up in her memory, and regrets of what could have been. Nearly 14 years after he said goodbye, Jared has returned to his hometown of Annapolis for the summer, as well as to his dark memories. However, with a new light illuminating them, revelations about his covert friendship are revealed, and as his secretive nature and progressing resentment deteriorates any relationships he has left, in an unexpected move, he reaches out to help her. With her in his life again, will he become even more entrenched in his acrimony or is she the only one who can bring down his walls, unlock Jared Becketts unconscious heart, and revive him before its too late for both of them?
